FRIENDS CELEBRATE WITH J. H. SAMMONS

Gleichen Couple Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Sammons of Gleichen were guests of honor at a party given them by their children, and members of their families, to celebrate fifty years of married life. The scene of the occasion was Meadonbrook Hall, where one hundred and fifty guests were invited to supper at 7.00 p.m.

The tables were arranged as a letter "E", and gleamed with silver and glass, and pretty dishes, laid on the white linen tablecloths. The tables were dotted with vases of yellow and white flowers, with just enough purple to accentuate the golden theme, which was carried out in the beautiful decorations both in the dining hall and the dance hall.

At the head table, the guests of honor, Mr. and Mrs. Sammons, sat on a large white wedding bell, with a three tiered wedding cake as table centre flanked by white and gold sticks. The beautiful wedding cake was made and decorated by Mr. and Mrs. Sammons' grand daughter, Mrs. Albert Desmet of Mr. and Mrs. Sammons' members of the family, and the Master of Ceremonies, Mr. George E. Bell, M.L.A., and his wife completed the seating of the head table. T. SLATER REPLACES BROTHER ON EXECUTIVE

Doug. Hirtle 2nd Vice-Pres In Legion

Sam Slaters resignation from the executive of the Strathmore Branch of the Legion was accepted at Tuesday night's meeting, following his moving from the district, and his brother, Ted Slater, was elected to the vacancy. Since the first vice presidency was also vacant, the second vice moved up, and D. S. Hirtle was elected to the office of second vice president.

H. C. Willson was named chairman of the sports committees, and will immediately start checking on the intrabran curling play-offs. It was suggested that the Strathmore Branch enter three rinks in the contest, and that they offer to entertain the other towns in the division for the play-off games.

Present at the meeting was Mr. Jack Mackenzie, first president of the old original G.W. V.A., and one of the prime movers in the erection of the Memorial Hall. Speaking briefly to the members, Mr. Mackenzie stated that he was glad to see that the branch was flourishing, and that the hall was in such good shape, testifying to its place in the community life, then switched to the visits he and his wife had had from local boys while overseas, and spoke of how glad they had been to have them come.

Following the meeting, there was a general sing-song, with Harold Payne at the piano, together with several enthusiastic games of darts and ping-pong on the new equipment purchased recently.

sentiment of friendship and congratulations were expressed, and Mr. Floyd Sammons, eldest son, presented his mother with a gold locket to pin on her dress, and his father a black cane with an engraved gold band on it, as mementos of the Anniversary, from the family.

Following the supper events, all guests went to the dance hall to enjoy a program, started by a sing-song, led by Mrs. Geo. Desjardine and accompanied on the piano by the versatile Mrs. Robert Burns. The program was arranged by Mrs. Denton Sammons, (nee Vivian Brown) consisted of solos by Mrs. Allan Quinnett, Mrs. Jack MacArthur, Mrs. Geo. Desjardine, dances by Norma and Patsy Buckley of Oids, violin solo by Elmer Bollinger accompanied by his wife at the piano, clarinet solo by Gordon Warner, grandson of the guests of honor, and a reading by Mrs. Alice Buckley. The program was arranged by Mr. Addison Wilson, on behalf of the guests presented Mr. Sammons with a beautiful engraved chair, and Mrs. Sammons with a gold wrist watch. The names of the friends, who thus extended their felicitations to the bride couple of fifty years ago, were typewritten on a long gold ribbon tying a large bouquet of beautiful gladioli, which was handed to Mrs. Sammons.

After Mrs. J. A. MacArthur singing "The End of A Perfect Day", the program ended, and being midnight, those who wished danced to music provided by the Steed Brothers of Namaka.

All guests signed their names in the Golden Anniversary Guest Book, thus giving Mr. and Mrs. Sammons a permanent register of the many well-wishers who were there in person to be remembered for a long time.

Change Of Name

The Pioneer Meat Market, well known to residents of Strathmore over a long period of years, has gone out of existence. In its place, is Ronnie's Meat Market, with the same butcher, Ronnie Hinchcliffe, also well known behind the counter, serving the same quality brand of meat, with the same service and the same humour, friends with the present shop building. The two buildings will be located on the school site and will considerably increase the shop facilities for students attending the Chiny Central High School.

The Board of Trustees has recently submitted a recommendation to the Department of Education to the effect that the building be purchased and subdivided in such a manner as to provide a more even distribution of the school rooms in operation. This may mean that one divisional trustee will be elected to represent the Arrowwood Consolidation and the districts adjacent thereto.

FARMER'S COLUMN—

By R. J. Milligan

Something new has been added. Sweet Clover Weevil (Sitona cylindricollis) has invaded our district, yes, just south of Strathmore. What will happen to our honey crop? What will happen to our Sweet Clover hay crops and green manure crops? We so soon find out the control method and way to combat one evil when another strikes to command our attention. If I have your attention, read on.

This new insect was discovered by Bill Bates, and then only by accident. He cut his Sweet Clover hay crop and a few days later he saw that his alfalfa field alongside the former Sweet Clover path was being stripped of its leaves. He investigated and found the Sweet Clover Weevil.

We do know that a fair measure of control can be had by ploughing down the growing crop of Sweet Clover to a depth of six inches in the fall but in this way we lose our hay crop. A second control measure is to dust or spray with a 3% D.D.T. dust. That is to say if the hay crop has been cut and the weevils move into your alfalfa, a dusting of the alfalfa with a 2% D.D.T. mixture will reduce the number and effect control.

This insect has two propagations a year. The first family can fly, thus seeking new locations to feast on Sweet Clover. The second generation do not fly but are the means of propagation for the next year. The beetle is almost nocturnal in its habits as it does not work actively during the bright sunshine; therefore you will be obliged to look at the base of the Sweet Clover or Alfalfa plants to find this pest.

The dusting should cover a surface of five feet wide on the affected field. As the weevils move ahead they consume the dusted plants and are destroyed.

Mr. G. A. Hobbs, entomologist, advises that alfalfa and Sweet Clover should not be planted close together so as to avoid the movement from the clover after cutting to the alfalfa.

I inspected the infested field yesterday and found that the weevils were dying on the portion that had been dusted. They seem to disintegrate and fall apart after being killed by the D.D.T. A sample of the insects and the damage they do to alfalfa are on display in the District Agriculturalist's office.

Last year, the weevil was reported at Gleichen and this year they are reported at Duchesne and throughout the Eastern Irrigation District.

Motorbikes at School

We heard recently opposition to the suggestion that a few of the school students were considering coming into town on motorcycles, and presumably parking them at the school. The opposition suggested that they be somewhere away from the school.

We feel that the critic was perfectly right in this, and since we've heard suggestions of more of these machines with the coming of a new and cheaper variety, it seems that this is the time to be vocal.

We saw an advertisement offering one for sale a short time ago, and re-naming it a "murder-cycle."

The name is quite correct. Sooner or later, no matter how expert the rider, the motorcycle manages to catch up with him, and that can be terrifying machines at that time. There was a saying during the recent war that the Germans felt that the way to defeat the Canadian forces was to give each of them a motor-bike, and the hospital staff grew so accustomed that their general query on receiving an accident case was: "Motorcycle?"

We have no objection to the students riding these machines in. It may be a good idea for them to be under their own power. But there would be no wisdom in allowing them at the school, where all sorts of children would be "inspecting" them, and tinkering with them. Eventually there would be disaster.

The situation has not yet cropped up, but it is wise not to have to shut the barndoor after the horse is gone.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Editor,

Unmated ladies are starting movements to "hold that hem line." They don't intend to be pushed around by fashion arrangers with designs on their pocketbooks, their looks, and their freedom of locomotion. Emancipation from the valedominated and furbelowed tyrannies of the past is too precious a thing to be surrendered sheep-like at the commercially inspired whim of the dress industry.

There is, however, a far seamier side to the whole question of long skirts at this time. Fashion may be spinach, but it can't be eaten—or worn—by those who most need food and clothing. As the owner of a Dallas, Texas, dress shop declared to the militant Little-Below-the-Knee Club of that city:

The new styles render even your coats obsolete and with half the world begging for material to cover its naked back, I can't see that there's any justification for these new drastic fashions.

Nor can I. Do Canadian women intend to disregard the demands of a humanity almost in rags, discard their perfectly good wardrobes, and rush into skirts that droop and bulge with the fashionable absurdity displayed by Mrs. Van Whipplesnitch at the races? Are Canadian women the spoiled and pampered darlings that so many foreigners believe them to be? The hem line may hold the answer.

Curling Rink Moving

Concrete was poured in the forms for the new curling rink, on Wednesday of this week, and continued all day Thursday. A big lift was given the work crew on Thursday, when a number of high school boys took a hand in the work, owing to their holiday while the teachers were meeting at the Teacher's Institute.

As soon as the concrete work has been finished, it is hoped that progress can be made which will be much more visible, and more heartening.

Hail was reported Monday at both Ardenode and Chancellor in both cases the fall being short, and sharp. While it was a very localized storm at Chancellor, it tended to spread around considerably in the Ardenode area.

According to reports, only about six farms were hit at Chancellor, though on these the damage went as high as about 35 percent.

- Foreign Letter -

News "leaks" had anticipated both the majority and minority reports of the Palestine Commission and it was known in advance that the Arabs would welcome neither; and that Jewish circles would be correspondingly pleased. The nature of London's first reaction, on the other hand, is something of a surprise if only because of the ready acceptance of the implication that the solution will have to be re-established by force. There is every sign of pleasure that Britain will sooner or later be relieved of her responsibilities under the mandate; but there is serious questioning as to how much of the "dirty work" in the interim will fall on her to perform. The Arab attitude leaves possibility of a compromise, in London's view, and inevitably means that there will be "dirty work" or someone.

THE ARAB ARGUMENT goes in this manner: Palestine is too small a country to support two economically viable states, and the frontiers proposed under partition will leave minorities on both sides. Local tension will thereby be greatly aggravated. "The imposition of partition must plunge the whole Middle East into war, in which the Arab States as a whole will take part actively. Even under the minority suggestion, Jewish immigration would be greatly increased; this alone would make Palestine's Arab inhabitants, with, at best, the multiplication of local incidents."

HELP: If force is inevitable, it is equally certain that Britain will demand a clearer definition of her responsibility for what happens—or lack of it—and a definite ruling as to what help she will receive from other U.N. Powers. Will the Commissioner's report force the U.S. to take an active hand, and was that its purpose? "The proposed solution puts it squarely on Washington to aid directly in making it work. Britain cannot be left holding the bag for a further two years."

EDDUS: The London Foreign Office holds that the decision to park the Jews from France in Germany has been universally misunderstood. The whole incident is regarded as another example of the general misinterpretation of British activities in the Palestine affair, and as yet another reason for welcoming any solution which will "get Britain out." The official view is that Cyprus is already crowded; and that no other place exists with suitable camps and other organizational facilities for the immediate handling of large numbers.

IT CAN'T BE OVERLOOKED, however, that the choice of Germany, with such appalling memories for a Jew, was peculiarly unfortunate. As he returned from that country does that anti-Semitism is "even less dead" than Nazism in its other manifestations. "If the occupation were to cease today, persecution of the Jews would recommence tomorrow." It is not suggested that the present camp will be the victims of such persecution by local inhabitants—or even they are, indeed, unlikely to be any number—"but it remains certain that if universal criticism of their action was not anticipated, the British authorities were surely blind beyond reason."

INDIA: The minority proposal for Palestine suffers from essentially the same weaknesses as the new two-Dominion arrangement in India. There are minorities in both the new countries, and it is these which are being persecuted in the present rioting. The temporary refusal of the two Governments to accept British aid in evacuating—partly by air—officials of the Pakistan Government, and other refugees, remains unexplained; this would surely have reduced the unbalanced, estimated to have reached a level of 5,000 casualties daily as times in recent weeks. As white refugees Agra and Khan (the latter is a Jew) to India, there is no indication that the civil war has yet reached such proportions (as has been intimated in the press) that the all-important negotiations between the two governments are held up.

AGREE THE AGREEMENT. It was inevitable that there would be considerable uncertainty regarding development of financial and economic power in the two new Dominions for some months ahead, in order to complete the constitution changes in time for the date set for transfer of power, all other matters were set aside for later consideration. But currently there is intense consultation on questions of defense, currency, customs and excise, and communications—all of which there is a strong presumption that the two countries will take joint action.

IN OTHER RESPECTS, the two countries are as separate and as great numbers of economic committees are starting discussions on an autonomous, as Canada and Australia, a wide variety of subjects in the two countries: The Dominion of India will nationalize certain basic industries, "exercise its power" over others, Pakistan, on the other hand, is not yet committed to any nationalization program. Each is expected to formulate its tariff policy, to afford a maximum of protection for growing home industry.

EXPANSION: Both Dominions badly want technical assistance. While "India" is unlikely to encourage foreign capital, having plenty of her own, Pakistan lacks large industrial enterprises and is expected to seek overseas financial help. The tendency is for Indians of both Dominions to insist on maintaining control of enterprises in which foreign capital is interested. The opportunities for expansion of Indian industry and trade are large, but foreign-exchange difficulties will remain the important limiting factor.

The two new Dominions remain within the sterling area and will, therefore, be subject to the foreign exchange restrictions which must be the time "dollar pool" is once again effective, and demands for dollars must be other sterling countries. The war-torn as low as possible. The present trade balance of both Indians is upset by the necessity to cover urgent food requirements at inflated prices in foreign markets.

A DOLLAR DEFICIT is inevitable, therefore, and London will determine how much of the £5 million Pounds recently released in sterling, may be converted into dollars. The £5 million Pounds is divided between the two Dominions, and at best will only barely suffice to meet basic requirements. Britain will review the position at the end of the year. Undoubtedly, within limits imposed by her own straitened circumstances, she will do her utmost to promote expansion of Indian trade.

BETWEEN: Canada's peculiar position, as a "hard-currency" member of the sterling area, leaves her with some part of the worst of both worlds. On the one hand, she faces the fact that, with the last of the U.S. loan to Britain frozen, the latter's only available dollars outside the basic reserve are the remaining $100 million, approximately, of the Canadian loan. It is still not official that Britain will discontinue paying for 50% of her Canadian purchases in U.S. currency; but the probabilities seem to be against it, and it is more likely that she will, indeed, now draw upon her Canadian reserve.

AND THE UNCERTAINTY is any way difficult. As a result of the growing crisis, one of Canada's most important dollar sources appears to be drying up. The Ottawa Foreign Exchange Control Board reports that U.S. dollar returns from foreign hotels and other tourist centers are far behind expectation, leading to the natural suspicion that widespread boarding is going on.

REALITIES: There are meanwhile few indications that the Ottawa Government intends to be more realistic than was the London regime in facing up to the crisis before it is too late. "The best setting weakness of hoping for the best is again in evidence." Canada's great need is for immediate import cuts; and for all possible efforts to secure drastic and early U.S. tariff reform, to give Canadian goods and services a chance to redress the adverse threat to nullify her financial value balance of trade which otherwise.

SQUEEZE:

British Food Minister Strachey's announcement that the U.K. is no longer purchasing food in the U.S.—and can continue in this manner for an appreciable period—has led to natural speculation in Canada as to possible increased demands on her. As elsewhere, other hopes center on the possibility that the failure of British imports generally, together with the import embargoes now instituted by many other countries (including France, Argentina, Brazil and South Africa) will impose a lowering of U.S. price levels, thereby reducing Canada's trade deficit with the U.S.

WASHINGTON ASSURANCES that the present cuts can have no such depressing effect on U.S. food prices are based on the fact that Britain's take is too small a percentage of the whole: of total U.S. grain exports last year, amounting to 15 million tons, Britain took little over 500,000 tons. Other analysts believe this reasoning to be correct as far as it goes, but point out that the British embargo applies only to food, and is but one of many general restrictions now in force—and need certainly not be the last.

ANY EXTENSIVE CONTINUATION of present embargo arrangements could certainly threaten U.S. prices to a point where foreign arguments against U.S. tariff levels—employed by Mr. Strachey, as well as by the Canadians—would gain considerable force. But implicit in the fact that U.S. imports apparently (at about as much as exports last month) is the possibility that the general practice of embargo can wreck foreign trade in general as much as, or more than, it hurts America.

SLUMP:

As this LETTER has already reported, there are evident British fears of a much worsening international trade position, and these are largely responsible for the initial reaction to the Attlee Government's new proposals. The new pattern for British industry will be characterized by sharp cuts in capital expenditure, plus the mobilization of effort toward priority export tasks, in a number generally similar to that of wartime—though possibly somewhat less in extent. There is to be an almost brutal concentration of some industries, the partial collapse of others and large-scale redeployment of labor.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE industrial quotations reflect a very real anxiety as to where the axe will fall. All industries fear ill-conceived and panicky measures initiated by Government officials ignorant of business logistics. The automobile industry has already been warned that only those products are readily salable abroad will be allowed to continue manufacturing—and those that must conform to a production pattern laid down by the Government. Car-makers fear that, in view of all the adverse factors besetting foreign markets next year, the latter cannot absorb their full output even if shipping becomes available.

AREA:

Secondly, there is to be an intense effort to redevelop trade within the sterling area and to exploit British markets in the hard-bargaining phase lying ahead. Some confidence is felt that, since Britain is the only large non-dollar producer of capital equipment in a world starved of dollars, her position generally, and in particular in the coming negotiations with Argentina, is by no means weak.

NATIONALIZATION OF BRAINS:

But this is to assume that Britain is producing, and is doing so at a high pitch of efficiency. At present, this is palpably not so, hence younger British scientists, led by Professor J. D. Bernal (President of the union-like Association of Scientific Workers), insist on full-scale utilization of scientific manpower, leaving only a bare residue of teachers and basic researchers undisturbed; this would enable concentrated "operational research" on immediate industrial problems, especially in the economy, and later on major industrial changes cutting labor and capital costs. Such a technique, it is pointed out, was outstandingly successful when applied to immediate problems of war.

OLDER SCIENTISTS, notably Sir Henry Dale, President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, oppose concentration of most of the scientific effort on concrete developments as equivalent to the reckless cropping of land without carefully nourishing the soil. Politically, the issue is yet undecided, but the scientists slightly favor the younger, Bernal group.

GENERAL:

Mexico's experience with the oil wells is a good example of the difficulties of nationalization; although paying off U.S. owners only 10 cents on the $1, she has never been able to make them pay—requires more foreign capital for their expansion. . . . GENERAL SMUTS is on record that British should be neutral in the undeclared war between the U.S. and Russia; he recommended this course before the South African Senate on May 27, as well as in London a year before. . . . RUMORS ARE AGAIN HEARD that the problem of solid gasoline has been solved—this by the Frenchman, Dr. Jean Fabis-Labour.

THESE ARE UNAUTHENTICATED REPORTS that the Paris conference (Marshall Plan) will ask for a special American (or Fund) grant to hasten convertibility of the various currencies. This would hardly be practicable unless preceded by domestic stabilizations, requiring revaluation of the pound and franc.

Doctor Giffen likes to tell the story of the actor who decided to give up his career and become a doctor, and in a short while he was achieving a great deal of success.

One day he was performing an operation for appendicitis, and, as usual, the operating theatre was filled with students.

The operation was performed so successfully that, at the end, the students broke into loud applause.

The old actor spirit returned, and the surgeon after bowing his appreciation, hurried back and removed the patient's tonsils as an encore!

Mrs. Willson: "Your husband seems to be a very brilliant man. I suppose he knows 'most everything'?"

Mrs. Milligan: "You'd be surprised. There are a lot of things he doesn't even suspect."

A New York night club performer squelched a heckler with this fifty: "You now have 32 teeth. Would you like to try for none?"

We heard the other day about the time Morley Deane in a state of joyful inebriation came sailing merrily into the city hall, and dropped anchor before the window of the registrar of births and deaths. "Good-mornin', gentleman," he sang out: "I wanna register the birth (hie) of twins." "Why do you say 'gentlemen'?" asked the man behind the window. "Can't you see I'm alone here?" "Alone?" shouted Morley, astonished. "Only one of you? Then I'd better go home and take another look. Maybe it isn't (hie) twins after all."

FARMING NEWS

Creeping red fescue is a long-lived perennial grass, native to many parts of Canada. It is a fine-leaved species which excels most other grasses in shade-tolerance and in durability or persistence under conditions of excessive wear. For that reason it is highly regarded for use in turf grass mixtures on playgrounds, parks, air-dromes and other areas where the turf is in constant use. It is also used extensively as a bottom-grass in pasture mixtures, says Dr. T. M. Stevenson, Dominion Agrostologist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Because of the common name "creeping red fescue," persons who are not acquainted with the species at once are reminded of couchgrass or other common creeping-rooted species which are difficult to eradicate. Growers need have no fears of similar difficulties with this species. In fact while underground stems or rhizomes are produced they are so short and grow so slowly that on casual observation it is difficult to distinguish from a bunch-grass. Eradication of this grass presents no problems.

HIGH QUALITY EGGS IN SUMMER

With a little more effort on the part of the poultrykeeper eggs of high quality can be produced during the heat of summer, says A. S. Johnson, Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Egg quality can be maintained only by suitable conditions of management from the time the eggs are laid. Once lost, it cannot be reclaimed and good storage in grading stations is of no avail. The chief responsibility rests with the farmer. Best results can be obtained by frequent gathering, rapid cooling and frequent delivery.

Deterioration of egg quality is most rapid at high temperatures. When eggs lie in nests in warm weather they lose their original animal heat very slowly.

They should be gathered as often as possible, not less than three times per day. When gathered, eggs should be cooled rapidly.

Experiments have shown that the quality of eggs is directly affected by high temperatures resulting from infrequent gathering and poor holding conditions. Unless they are held in a room in which the temperature is below 60 degrees F., and not too dry, there is little advantage in collecting them often.

If eggs are delivered to grading stations or stores at least twice a week then there is assurance of good quality being maintained. It is of little importance whether hens are kept indoors or are outdoors on pasture. Dark yolks, resulting from feeding on pasture, will lower the grade if the quality is not good, but not otherwise.

Additional returns to the producer are obtained by attention to a number of small details in the production of eggs. Dirty eggs will bring less returns regardless of the interior quality. They will require very little cleaning if nests are clean and if the hens are kept inside in wet weather. Male birds should not be kept with the flock in summer. Fertile eggs start development above 68 degrees F. and the quality is affected. Wire baskets for gathering make for more rapid

In Our Backshop...

Back in July we broke down and told our readers about the amount of time we spend playing checkers and drinking coffee in a weekly newspaper.

Our friends will therefore appreciate, we feel, the news that we're going to have an extra hour for coffee... or checkers... in every week. Or one of us will, that is.

It's all because a few weeks ago we decided that this is the age of mechanization, and tried to do something about the necessity of handwork around here. So we called in the mechanical genius of Risdon's Machine Shop, and asked if some work-eliminating method couldn't be devised.

But it wasn't so easy as all that: we had to throw in a bit of our own genius also. So after mixing all this brain-power, and a lot of hard work and a lot of perseverance, (the perseverance was on our part trying to keep Risdon's on the job) we finally devised an arrangement which takes the sheets of paper as they come off the press, and carries them to the folding machine without the aid of an operator.

Formerly it took one man all his time for more than an hour on Thursday to take care of this moving operation. Now, the machine does the work, and we have an hour to play checkers, or maybe to stand back of the machine, and call gleefully: "Look, mom, no hands!"

We're pretty proud of our new tangled machinery, (thanks to Risdon's) and it just occurred to us that some of our friends might like to see it. It's almost sure to be running around five o'clock, if any of them care to drop in next Thursday for a look.

But don't look for us. We'll be away drinking coffee.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The Lesson-Sermon at Christian Science churches Sunday will deal with "Substance." It is elucidated in passages such as these: "The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment." (Luke 12:22). "The demands of Truth are spiritual, and reach the body through Mind. The best interpreter of man's needs said: 'Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink.'" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 170).
